To Whom It May Concern:

I am pleased to provide this reference for SimGolfNow and the team behind its growing network of indoor golf locations.

As a TrackMan Sales Representative serving Upstate New York, I have had the opportunity to work with SimGolfNow as they have developed and expanded their indoor golf concept. I have seen firsthand their approach to designing, deploying, and operating TrackMan-powered golf simulator environments.

What distinguishes SimGolfNow is that they have built more than simply a simulator installation. They have developed an operating model designed to make premium indoor golf accessible in a variety of settings, including commercial properties, mixed-use facilities, clubs, and other amenity-driven environments.

Their team understands that a successful simulator operation requires the technology, physical space, customer experience, booking process, access, support, and ongoing operations to work together. They have put considerable effort into creating a model that allows property and facility owners to offer a professional golf experience without having to develop all of that operational infrastructure themselves.

As indoor golf continues to expand beyond traditional golf facilities, I believe professionally operated concepts such as SimGolfNow can provide property owners and facility operators with an attractive way to introduce golf into their properties. They are knowledgeable about the indoor golf market, responsive when issues arise, and continually looking for ways to improve the golfer experience.

For organizations considering a TrackMan-powered indoor golf facility and looking for an experienced operating partner, I would encourage them to speak with the SimGolfNow team and learn more about their model.

Sincerely,

Anthony Turrisi
